Functions

1. Growth and development
2. Metabolic rate, anabolism and catabolism
3. Regulation of reproduction and energy balance
4. Reproduction

How it works

The endocrine system works with the nervous system to coordinate and regulate cellular activities in the body, via hormones.

- Endocrine glands release hormones into the blood stream to circulate throughout the body.

- Each hormone has a specific function in the body and has its own specific receptor for the hormone to bind to.

- Each hormone specifically binds to a target cell.

- A target cell has receptors on their cell membrane designed to respond to that specific hormone.

- When the hormone binds to the receptor, the receptor sends a "lock and key" mechanism.

- After the hormone binds to the cell receptor, a chemical chain of events occurs, leading to a hormonal response.

Effectors: In the endocrine system, an effector is a target cell that responds to a hormone, producing a response.

ENDOCRINE VS. EXOCRINE GLANDS

Endocrine glands: Glands that secrete hormones directly into the bloodstream. Examples include the hypothalamus, pituitary, thyroid, parathyroid, adrenal, pancreas, and gonads.

Exocrine glands: Glands that secrete their products into a duct, which then carries the secretion to the site of action. Examples include the salivary glands, sweat glands, and the digestive system.

REPRODUCTIVE SYSTEM

Reproductive system: a series of organs that work together to allow the transmission of genetic material in response to hormonal signals in the blood.
