

1. Ensure your system contains a non-thermostatic and a hot water thermostat, and that both are set to appropriate temperature levels (usually 55°C for the cold temperature and between 55 – 60°C for the hot water temperature).
2. Programme your heating and hot water to be off when you are not in the house. If you are concerned about sensitive hot settings to any exposed pipework, it is advisable to fit a frost protection system – your installer can advise you about this.
3. Think about how you use your centrally hot water – if you have a storage system, it is not necessary to have this switched on all the time, even when you are in the house.
4. Consider the heat up times required for your central heating. Every home responds differently when the heating is switched on. Adjust the start time so that you are not cold when you get up in the morning. A shorter heat up time is required for other heating periods.
5. In the evening, plan the house to be up to temperature. It is often possible to switch off the heating up to an hour before you go to bed, without any noticeable reduction in comfort.
