

Edith Wharton

Edith Wharton (born Edith Newbold Jones, January 24, 1862 – August 15, 1937) was an American writer and designer. Wharton drew upon her insider's knowledge of the upper-class New York "aristocracy" to portray realistically the lives and morals of the Gilded Age. In 1907, she became the first woman to win the Pulitzer Prize in Fiction, for her novel The Age of Innocence. She was inducted into the National Academy of Arts in 1930. Among her other well-known works are The House of Mirth, the novella Ethan Frome, and several notable ghost stories.

Despite not publishing her first novel until she was forty, Wharton became an extraordinarily productive writer. In addition to her 15 novels, seven novellas, and eighty-five short stories, she published poetry, books on design, travel, travel and lecture notes, and a memoir.

Many of Wharton's novels are characterized by subtle irony, and she is often credited with being the first American writer to use the technique of the "unreliable narrator".

Wharton's novels, short stories, and travel writing were widely read and praised. She was a member of the American Academy of Arts and Letters, the National Academy of Design, and the National Institute of Arts and Letters. She was also a member of the American Academy of Arts and Letters, the National Academy of Design, and the National Institute of Arts and Letters.

Industrial Revolution and the Arts
The Industrial Revolution was a period of major change in the world, from the late 18th to the mid-19th century. It was a time when new technologies and inventions were being developed and used to produce goods and services more efficiently. This led to a rapid increase in production and a decline in the price of many goods. The Industrial Revolution also led to the growth of the middle class and the decline of the aristocracy.

The Industrial Revolution had a profound impact on the arts. It led to the development of new styles of architecture, painting, and literature. It also led to the rise of the novel as a popular form of fiction.
