

Wireless sync to a computer

Syncing occurs automatically any time your Fitbit One is within 20 feet of a wireless USB dongle that is plugged into your computer's USB port. Fitbit Connect software must be installed for your tracker to sync with Fitbit.com.

Setting up your Fitbit One on a computer

1. Ensure your Fitbit One has sufficient battery charge: hold down the tracker's button for a few seconds. If the screen does not illuminate, charge your tracker for at least 5 minutes before setting up.

To charge your Fitbit One, align the gold contacts on your tracker with the gold contacts on the inside of the charging cable, then plug it into your computer's USB port.

*Please note that the charging cable is for charging only; it will not sync your tracker's data to Fitbit.com.

2. Once the tracker's display turns on, you will be ready to set it up.

3. Plug the wireless USB dongle into a USB port on your computer. This needs to be connected to send data from your tracker to your Fitbit account.

4. Once your tracker is charged and your wireless USB dongle is plugged into your computer, continue the setup process by installing Fitbit Connect.

The Art of Latina and Latino Elderhood Katynka Z. Martínez, Mérida M. Rúa, 2022-11-20 It is widely recognized that Latinos are a sizable and diverse population and that we are a young demographic The median age of non Hispanic white Americans is 58 whereas for Latinos it is 30 Footnote1 Perhaps this partially explains the dearth of attention afforded to the topic of aging Latinos by academic scholarship and the mainstream media This special issue compellingly alerts us to the reality that there is a growing aging Latino population about which we know very little and that deserves our attention I am grateful to Katynka Martínez and Mérida Rúa for curating The Art of Latina and Latino Elderhood since this special issue responds to this significant gap in our knowledge with an exciting set of academic articles and creative contributions that challenges not only our assumptions about Latinos and aging but also our thinking on the types of contributions we include in our journal pages Katynka and Mérida make the case that the story of Latino elderhood is best conveyed through a truly multidisciplinary and interdisciplinary approach bringing together public policy humanistic social sciences and artistic interventions So for the first time Latino Studies is pleased to feature a novel in progress a photo essay dial go an artist s monologue and a dialogue among actors alongside more traditional academic articles I think you will agree that this issue before you beautifully conveys why the subject of Latinos and aging should concern all of us and that it will powerfully spur other researchers and artists to take up the invitation to continue to share new evocative stories about the pleasures difficulties and complexities of Latinx later life Previously published in Latino Studies Volume 19 issue 4 December 2021
