 Research. Operations Research House, 1970 In the paper the equivalence of three ways of viewing the classical chemical equilibrium problem is discussed From the point of view of classical chemistry this problem can be stated as follows Given the set of reactions that may occur among all the species of a chemical system their equilibrium constants and the initial composition of the system i.e. the amounts of each species present in the system initially find the equilibrium composition of the system From the point of view of kinetics the problem is to determine the evolution of the various parameters describing the system for the evolution of the various parameters describing the system from their initial values When the parameters cease to change the system must be in equilibrium Given the same system thermodynamics seeks that composition at which the usable or free energy remaining in the system is at a minimum It can be shown that the system will then be at equilibrium Much of the material contained herein is old It is presented here in a consistent notation and in a way intended to emphasize the common aspects of the three points of view Author Chemistry 121 Worksheet Answers Steve
