

A detailed ball-and-stick molecular model of a complex organic molecule, likely a protein or a large carbohydrate, serves as the background. The model features a central chain of atoms, with various side groups and branching structures. The atoms are represented by spheres of different colors: white for hydrogen, light green for carbon, and dark green for oxygen. The bonds are shown as thin rods connecting the spheres. The overall structure is intricate, with many loops and turns, suggesting a complex three-dimensional shape.
