

The Importance of the Police Report

Most entertainment media represents police work as an unrelenting and constant barrage of exciting chases and shootouts, where the good guy always wins in the end. Unfortunately, this is, for the most part, quite an inaccurate depiction of the majority of police work. In fact, I believe the vast majority of good police work is supported entirely by an officer's ability to present accurate, detailed and informative information in the form of the police report. Nearly every service we perform as police officers calls for the initiation of some type of permanent record. This record may be anything from a single line entry concerning an unlocated problem to a lengthy detailed investigative document describing unimaginable pain and suffering.

One's skills as a police officer are largely evaluated based on his or her written reports. An officer must not only be able to do his job well and within the scope of the law, but he must also be able to accurately record information concerning those activities and present it to those who were not there.

In most instances, the ranking supervisor will not be present as an officer is investigating an incident. It will likely be this supervisor who ultimately reviews and passes judgment on the reports generated by the officer. It will be this supervisor's responsibility to determine whether or not the officer followed the proper policies and procedures of the department, as well as applicable laws concerning the initial investigation. Eventually there is the potential for a large number of people to read these reports. In many instances, it will be up to some of these people
