

Into The Wild Essay: Into The Wild

Into The Wild Essay Throughout life, many people take big chances and do things that are a little out of their comfort zone. But would you, or anyone else in the world, ever truly throw away your life and do something that no other person would truly do? Would you leave everything in your life behind, and start a new life that you don't know what the outcome will be? Not everyone is meant to take risks and chances. With this world, no one ever truly knows what will happen. Some people don't always have the right capabilities that are needed to fulfill a full life in the wild. Christopher McCandless was a man who never really cared what others thought about him, he always thought that the actions he was making were always the right ones. Which was not always necessarily correct. "I think part of what got him into trouble was that he did too much thinking. Sometimes he tried too hard to make sense..."show more content...

"Chris had so much natural talent, but if you tried to coach him, to polish his skill, to bring out that final ten percent, a wall went up. He resisted instruction of any kind." (Pg. 111) But as you can see, some people take that gift that they have, and take it for granted. They think that since they are smart and know what they're doing, they are above people and when others try to tell them what to do they shut down. Which is not really a great quality if someone is trying to go into the wild. If someone tries telling them what is wrong about the decision that they have made, then they shut down and don't want to hear the other side of the story. People who have this characteristic in them, they seem to just focus on what they want, and they do not want to listen to anyone else and what they have to say. They continue to fight for what they believe is right, for example, going into the wild to get away from the
