

Thermal Energy

Temperature is how hot or cold something is.

A thermometer is a tool used to measure temperature.

A thermometer can be used to tell how hot or cold it is outside. It can tell if you have a fever. It can tell the temperature inside your house.

Thermal Energy
All the things around us are made of matter. Matter is made up of very small particles that you cannot see unless you are using a microscope. These particles are always moving. The energy of moving molecules is called thermal energy. The more thermal energy an object has, the faster the particles move. Thermal energy flows from objects to cool objects.

Heat is the flow of thermal energy.

Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and energy expenditure (EE) of sedentary, middle-aged women. The subjects were randomly assigned to a control group (CON) and an exercise group (EX). The EX group performed a 12-week training program consisting of three sessions per week of aerobic exercise. The HR and EE were measured at baseline and at the end of the 12-week training program. The EX group showed a significant decrease in HR and a significant increase in EE compared to the CON group. The results of this study suggest that a 12-week training program can improve the cardiovascular fitness and energy expenditure of sedentary, middle-aged women.
