THE MEDIEVAL EUROPEAN FEUDAL SYSTEM History Reading

At the end of the Western Roman Empire in 476 C.E., Europe entered a period known as the Middle Ages. This 1,000-year era in European history is characterized by population growth, particularly in urban centers, in addition to decreases in trade, literature, and cultural life. The Middle Ages were marked by peace, and others by consistent warfare, plagues, social unrest, and revolts. Yet, one consistency of the era was that the lack of a strong central government in Europe created a sense of disorder with limited or no laws and protections. Therefore, in order to retain their power and wealth, lords and nobles created the feudal system, a system of reciprocal military and economic obligations that defined much of the way of life during the Middle Ages. It should be understood that feudalism was not applied uniformly across the entire period, as differences in laws and customs varied across both time and place. Furthermore, as differences in laws and customs varied across both time and place, the term feudalism was not in use by those who lived under the system, but instead developed later by historians. When Adam Smith was looking to describe and categorize the economic system of the Middle Ages, he used the term feudalism to describe the system.

The concept of feudalism exists, therefore, as a series of reciprocal military and economic obligations that defined much of the way of life during the Middle Ages. It should be understood that feudalism was not applied uniformly across the entire period, as differences in laws and customs varied across both time and place. Furthermore, as differences in laws and customs varied across both time and place, the term feudalism was not in use by those who lived under the system, but instead developed later by historians. When Adam Smith was looking to describe and categorize the economic system of the Middle Ages, he used the term feudalism to describe the system.

In the medieval kingdoms were small, kings were weak, and lords were powerful. The lords provided land to the knights who were loyal to them. In return, the knights provided the lords with military protection. This system was known as feudalism. The lords provided land to the knights who were loyal to them. In return, the knights provided the lords with military protection. This system was known as feudalism. The lords provided land to the knights who were loyal to them. In return, the knights provided the lords with military protection. This system was known as feudalism.

As part of their contract, knights provided money, crops, and other goods to the lords. The lords provided land to the knights who were loyal to them. In return, the knights provided the lords with military protection. This system was known as feudalism. The lords provided land to the knights who were loyal to them. In return, the knights provided the lords with military protection. This system was known as feudalism.

How to diagram the feudal system. Use the arrows to document the relationships between the lords, knights, and peasants. Write the names of the lords, knights, and peasants in the boxes next to the arrows on the right side, briefly describe the relationship between them, and welcome to draw symbols or pictures in the boxes on the left side.
