

□ WINDOW OPERATOR

CIRCUIT OPERATION

Power Windows

The power windows are operated by motor having two field windings that control the direction of rotation. To move the window down, one field coil is energized. To move the window up, the other field coil is energized. The WINDOW SWITCH is normally OFF. When the SWITCH is momentarily act in the Up or Down position, power is fed to the Up or Down field coil of the motor which moves the window.

The power window motors require a large current for their operation. The current is supplied through the POWER WINDOW RELAY and the 30 amp CIRCUIT BREAKER in the FUSE BLOCK. The relay provides power only when the WINDOW SWITCH is in the Start or On position. Power for the relay coil is supplied through the GAUGES FUSE.

When troubleshooting, if neither window operates, look for faults in assembly that is common to both window motors - the fuse, the circuit breaker and the relay. If a window operates in one direction only, replace the switch first.
