

Introduction to Your Security System

Your security system uses wireless technology to warn your family about intrusion, carbon monoxide and fire. It may also be used to control lights and appliances within your home. The system has the capabilities of communicating with a central monitoring station and sending messages to a numeric pager.

This manual describes how to operate your system. It will guide you through programming instructions for system features as well as basic arming and disarming commands for the system.

Security System Components

The security system uses devices called sensors that use radio waves to communicate alarms to the Control Panel (panel).

The system is supervised, meaning that the panel checks the status of each sensor to detect problems. If the panel detects trouble it will notify you with beeps and indicator lights on the panel itself.

Your security system installation may include any of the following devices:

Control Panel

The Control Panel is used to operate and program your security system. It communicates to you through voice messages, beeps, and by lighting or flashing buttons. The panel can communicate to a central monitoring station, numeric pager, or both.

Touchpads

Remote Handheld Touchpads are used to control the security system primarily from within the home.

* Dialog Touchtalk 2-Way RF Touchpads are used to control the security system primarily from within the home. It's used to hear commands from the control panel when it's active.

Keychain Touchpads are used to control the security system from within or near the outside of your home.

Sensors

Indoor Motion Sensors detect motion in a protected indoor area. When motion is detected the panel may respond by sounding chimes or an alarm.

Existential-Phenomenological Perspectives in Psychology Ronald S. Valle,Steen Halling,2013-03-08 When I began to study psychology a half century ago it was defined as the study of behavior and experience By the time I completed my doctorate shortly after the end of World War II the last two words were fading rapidly In one of my first graduate classes a course in statistics the professor announced on the first day Whatever exists exists in some number We dutifully wrote that into our notes and did not pause to recognize that thereby all that makes life meaningful was being consigned to oblivion This bland restructuring perhaps more accurately destruction of the world was typical of its time 1940 The influence of a narrow scientific attitude was already spreading throughout the learned disciplines In the next two decades it would invade and tyrannize the social sciences education and even philosophy To be sure quantification is a powerful tool selectively employed but too often it has been made into an executioner's axe to deny actuality to all that does not yield to its procrustean demands
