Designing VLSI systems represents a challenging task It is a transfonnation among different specifications corresponding to different levels of design abstraction behavioral stntctural and physical The behavioral level describes the functionality of the design It consists of two components static and dynamic The static component describes operations whereas the dynamic component describes sequencing and timing The structural level contains infonnation about components control and connectivity The physical level describes the constraints that should be imposed on the floor plan the placement of components and the geometry of the design Constraints of area speed and power are also applied at this level To implement such multilevel transfonnation a design methodology should be devised taking into consideration the constraints limitations and properties of each level The mapping process between any of these domains is non isomorphic A single behavioral component may be transfonned into more than one structural component Design methodologies are the most recent evolution in the design automation era which started off with the introduction and subsequent usage of module generation especially for regular structures such as PLA s and memories A design methodology should offer an integrated design system rather than a set of separate unrelated routines and tools A general outline of a desired integrated design system is as follows Decide on a certain unified framework for all design levels Derive a design method based on this framework Create a design environment to implement this design method      Reuse Techniques for VLSI Design Ralf Seepold, Arno

Kunzmann, 1999-03-31 Reuse Techniques for VLSI Design is a reflection on the current state of the art in design reuse for microelectronic systems To that end it is the first book to garner the input of leading experts from both research and application areas These experts document herein not only their more mature approaches but also their latest research results

Firstly it sets out the background and support from international organisations that enforce System on a Chip SoC design by reuse oriented methodologies This overview is followed by a number of technical presentations covering different requirements of the reuse domain These are presented from different points of view i e IP provider IP user designer isolated reuse intra company or inter company reuse More general systems or case studies e g metrics are followed by comprehensive reuse systems e g reuse management systems partly including business models Since design reuse must not be restricted to digital components mixed signal and analog reuse approaches are also presented In parallel to the digital domain this area covers research in reuse database design Design verification and legal aspects are two important topics that are closely related to the realization of design reuse These hot topics are covered by presentations that finalize the survey of outstanding research development and application of design reuse for SoC design Reuse Techniques for VLSI Design is an invaluable reference for researchers and engineers involved in VLSI ASIC design
