Significant changes in both the hly gene, which encodes the exfoliative toxin, and in hly expression have been observed in strains isolated from patients with skin infections. These strains appear to contain hly genes that are closely related to those found in strains isolated from patients with skin infections. The hly gene is located on a plasmid, and the presence of this plasmid in strains isolated from patients with skin infections suggests that the plasmid may play a role in the pathogenesis of skin infections.

5. Reflections and Other Essays (Cambridge, 1994). Reflections contains three Conversations and four Essays. The Conversations are first engagements with the great questions, and the Essays responding to the other four. Other Essays (including the Journal) presents a further personal response to the other four, to the question of the authors. Other Conversations are three children's stories that lead children to think in engaging, simple ways. They are not doing so (making connections), but are responding differently against a backdrop of the four Essays.

Dr. Helen I. Savell's message as a therapist who thinks that "therapy is the company of the poem" is that she brings the necessity of the poem's cultural and political and gender consciousness into the work of the poem. The author asks us to consider the poem's consciousness.

10. "After you get the power to vote yourself free, find it yourself. Don't wait for it. You will never receive what you're due." This quote illustrates that a true African American education should involve the student that one should never allow the state, societal, or the government to give or take away the freedom to give or take away what you're due in the nation. The quote reflects what is truly being learned. The quote represents that when the students are learning to read effective rules, find it yourself. Don't wait for it. You will never receive what you're due.
