Allen, T.R. Bashore, 1995-09-27 Component cognitive processes have played a critical role in the development of experimental aging research and theory in psychology as attested by articles published on this theme. However, in the last five to ten years, there has been a substantial increase in the number of articles attempting to isolate a single factor or small subset of factors responsible for age differences in information processing. This view of aging is frequently termed the complexity model of the generalized slowing model, the primary assumption being that age differences in cognition are due simply to a relatively larger performance decrement on the part of older adults compared to younger adults as task complexity increases. Because generalized complexity theorists have questioned the utility of using component cognitive processes as theoretical constructs, the editors feel it is time to restate why component cognitive processes are critical to any thorough understanding of age differences in cognition. Thus, the present edited volume represents an attempt to demonstrate the utility of the process-specific approach to cognitive aging. Central to this effort are illustrations of how regression analyses may provide evidence for general slowing by maximizing explained variance while at the same time obscuring local sources of variance. The book concentrates on age differences in word and language processing because these factors relate to reading, which is a critical cognitive process used in everyday life. Furthermore, age differences in word and language processing illustrate the importance of taking component cognitive processes into consideration. The breadth of coverage of the book attests to the wide range of cognitive processes involved in word and language processing. The School Journal, 1907

Magic Tree House Series: An Instructional Guide for Literature Melissa Callaghan, 2016-07-01 Looking for ways to add rigor to your students' explorations of rich complex literature. Students will be whisked away to enchanting worlds as they analyze this popular children's book series. Magic Tree House Series: An Instructional Guide for Literature provides engaging activities that incorporate the following research-based literacy skills: close reading tasks, text-based vocabulary practice, cross-curricular activities, text-dependent questions, reader response, writing prompts, leveled comprehension questions, story elements, comprehension tasks, diverse and relevant assessments. Strengthen your students' literacy skills by implementing this high-interest resource in your classroom. Academic Dishonesty Bernard E. Whitley, Jr., Patricia Keith-Spiegel, 2001-11-01 This book, written by two nationally renowned scholars in the area of ethics in higher education, is intended to help teachers and administrators understand and handle problems of academic dishonesty. Chock full of practical advice, the book is divided into three parts. Part I reviews the existing published literature about academic dishonesty among college and university students and how faculty members respond to the problem. Part II presents practical advice designed to help college and university instructors and administrators deal proactively and effectively with academic dishonesty. Part III considers the broader question of academic integrity as a system-wide issue within institutions of higher education.
