Abstract

This was the first time during the 1980s that the Biological Resources Division has been involved in preparing systematic checklists for new species. One goal was to verify that the correct scientific names were used (Bullard & B.S.). The names were also in Chinese. The Biological Resources Division's Chinese is impressive. That was the purpose of the Chinese and English checklists. The Chinese list was a checklist of the Chinese names of the species. The English list was a checklist of the English names of the species.
