Fostering Culture Through Film Elda Buonanno Foley, Patrizia Comello Perry, 2016-05-11 The perceived lack of understanding of cultural diversity in the American learning community has led instructors to challenge assumptions and stereotypes while addressing misconceptions Teachers of foreign languages and cultural studies in particular feel the need to redesign curricula and lesson plans to better serve the learning community of the twenty first century The common starting point resides in the paradox that exists in today's connected world while global access to information makes learners aware of the infinite variety of cultural diversity it does not however make them critical thinkers For this reason there is opportunity to reshape critical thinking within a more global perspective while enhancing the tools to identify interpret and compare the different cultural models that learners encounter The book demonstrates the theories and practical applications by which instructors use contemporary film to provide insightful readings on diverse local communities communities that form the basis of global culture This collection of essays will serve as a pedagogical tool and resource offering methods and examples of a communicative approach to analyze and integrate cultural diversities similarities and problems in the second language curricula methods that expose students to different cultural models while scaffolding their critical approach to multiple layers of common and specific values This work will encourage a dialogue and long lasting conversation on methodologies and teaching strategies rethought reapplied and remolded to the new learning environments

Hollywood or History? Scott L. Roberts, Charles J. Elfer, 2021-01-01. The challenges of teaching history are acute where we consider the world history classroom. Generalized world history courses are a part of many if not most K-12 curricular frameworks in the United States. While United States history tends to dominate the scholarship and conversation, there are an equally wide number of middle-level and secondary students and teachers engaged in the study of world history in our public schools. And the challenges are real. In the first place, if we are to mark content coverage as a curricular obstacle in the history classroom, generally, then we must underscore that concern in the world history classroom and for obvious reasons. The curricular terrain to choose from is immense and forever expanding, dealing with the development of numerous civilizations over millennia and across a wide geographic expanse. In addition to curricular concerns, world historical topics are inherently farther away from most students' lives, not just temporally but often geographically and culturally. Thus the rationale for the present text, Hollywood or History: An Inquiry-Based Strategy for Using Film to Teach World History. The reviews of the first volume, Hollywood or History: An Inquiry-Based Strategy for Using Film to Teach United States History, strategy have been overwhelmingly positive, especially as it pertains to the application of the strategy for practitioner. Classroom utility and teacher practice have remained our primary objectives in developing the Hollywood or History strategy, and we are encouraged by the possibilities of Volume II and the capacity of this most recent text to impact teaching and learning in world history. We believe that students' connection to film along with teachers' ability to use film in an effective manner will help alleviate some of the challenges of teaching world history. The book provides 30 secondary lesson plans, grades 6-12, that address nine eras in world history.
