

Depending on how playful I am feeling I will sometimes introduce myself as an alchemist. There is a trivial explanation for this remark, which is all that I usually offer. In my role as a software developer I literally conjure up symbols from the aether and assemble them in an information hierarchy where they, in turn, control and manipulate metallurgic elements in the external world. While this formulation accurately describes my work, my identification with alchemy also communicates other layers of meaning, suggesting metaphysical transformations and esoteric perspectives.

Carl Jung understood alchemy as a symbolic system meant to represent the journey from a leaden consciousness to a golden one. When combined with the Hermetic principle which stipulates that everything in our inner world is mirrored and paralleled in the outer world, we arrive at an alternative understanding of alchemy that is both practical and meaningful. I sometimes imagine the medieval alchemists carving out small corners of the external world, typically through a craft, where they labored to introduce elegance, harmony, and beauty. According to alchemical principles, this work would necessarily entail a corresponding inner transformation.

This narrative may simply be a fanciful way of expressing the idea that if you love what you do you will become a better person for it. I love what I do. I am passionate and enthusiastic and embrace life's challenges with delight. It is difficult for me to distinguish between my work, studies, and hobbies, as together they are becoming my life-work.

Education and learning have always been a primary focus of my social and intellectual pursuits. Both of my parents were educators, and my schooling instilled the value of education for its own sake. Growing up in New York City and traveling extensively around the world has also greatly expanded my worldview. The exploration and exchange of knowledge continues to be an ongoing source of personal accomplishment.

My academic training has followed a strong analytical tradition, and I have cultivated a devotion to science, the scientific methodology, as well as emerging technology. This combination has translated well to the domain of software architecture and development, but my satisfaction in applying these talents is highly contingent upon the setting. I truly thrive when my work is directed towards constructive, meaningful goals with humanistic consequences.

At Princeton this focus was articulated through my dialogue with Cognitive Science, where questions concerning the nature and limits of knowledge, learning, and creativity shaped my studies. On the philosophical side I was

Hindi Dalit Literature and the Politics of Representation Sarah Beth Hunt, 2014-08-07 This study explores how Dalits in north India have used literature as a means of protest against caste oppression Including fresh ethnographic research and interviews it traces the trajectory of modern Dalit writing in Hindi and its pivotal role in the creation rise and reinforcement of a distinctive Dalit identity The book challenges the existing impression of Hindi Dalit literature as stemming from the Dalit political assertion of the 1980s and as being chiefly imitative of the Marathi Dalit literature model Arguing that Hindi Dalit literature has a much longer history in north India it examines two differing strands that have taken root in Dalit expression the early popular production of smaller literary pamphlets and journals at the beginning of the 20th century and more contemporary modes such as autobiographies short stories and literary criticism The author highlights the ways in which such various forms of literary works have supported the proliferation of an all encompassing identity for the so called untouchable castes She also underscores how these have contributed to their evolving political consciousness and consolidation of newer heterogeneous identities making a departure from their long perceived image The work will be important for those in Dalit studies subaltern history Hindi literature postcolonial studies political science and sociology as well as the informed general reader

Identity, Diversity and Teaching for Social Justice Juliet Perumal, 2007 In recent times educational reformers have proposed ways of using education to reduce inequality overcome discriminatory values and attitudes and alleviate social problems An increasing number of language theorists and practitioners contends that in order to reduce inequality it is essential to address the personal cultural and political implications of language teaching Awareness of these factors activate the need to gain deeper insight into the personal and professional nuances of teachers lives The gap between sociolinguistic theory and educational practice points to the fact that linguists and educationists themselves carry the prejudices of particular social ideological cultural and geographical backgrounds Who teaches what to whom why and how affects curricular decisions which can thus become fraught with political allegiances in this way the non neutrality of language pedagogy is confirmed Drawing from a suite of data sources the book explores the following questions Do teachers autobiographical experiences shape their professional identities Does subscription to counter hegemonic ideologies impact teachers personal and professional positionality and authority What contributions can feminist theorising make to language teaching in socially diverse classrooms Through an exploration of these questions the book gestures towards an imperative to re think educative and pedagogic relationships and the politics of difference and dialogue in demographically diverse classrooms that subscribe to social redress agendas
