Abstract

These studies demonstrate the need to have control after a disaster. In the long-term, a disaster can have a negative impact on the local economy. People may lose their jobs and income. They may lose their homes and possessions. They may lose their health and well-being. They may lose their sense of community and belonging. They may lose their hope and faith. They may lose their lives. The disaster can have a long-term impact on the community and the world. It can change the way we live and the way we think. It can change the way we feel and the way we act. It can change the way we see the world and the way we see ourselves. It can change the way we live and the way we die. It can change the way we love and the way we are loved. It can change the way we hope and the way we are hoped for. It can change the way we dream and the way we are dreamed of. It can change the way we live and the way we die. It can change the way we love and the way we are loved. It can change the way we hope and the way we are hoped for.
