■ Accounting for the environment: The most important accounting for the environment is the environmental impact statement (EIS). The EIS is a document that describes the potential environmental impacts of a proposed project and the measures that will be taken to avoid, minimize, or compensate for those impacts. The EIS is required for all major federal actions that significantly affect the environment. The EIS process is a key part of the federal decision-making process for major projects, such as highways, bridges, and dams. The EIS process involves a series of steps, including scoping, analysis, and decision-making. The EIS process is designed to ensure that the environmental impacts of a proposed project are fully understood and that the measures to avoid, minimize, or compensate for those impacts are adequately planned and implemented.
