Information Technology in Health Science Education E. de Land, 2013-11-11 This first volume is but an introduction to the growing use of computer based systems in health science education. It is unlikely that the intellectual or applied system constructs herein are either exhaustive of the field or immutable. Growth is inevitable. For one thing the field is still fractured and loosely organized which is an inevitable description of an adolescent science in a rich mine of ideas. There is emerging however an organizing concept. A short look into the future indicates that educational system design will be dominated by a concept which for want of a better term we may call an information system. Actually this term derives from an early New York World's Fair exhibition designed by Charles Eames entitled the Informational Machine in which the designer illustrated once again his insight into the future by showing how in a fundamental manner the digital computer promised to affect and to change our lives and this change is by no means completed. Even during the publication of this volume the basic sciences requisite to the development of an information machine have evolved significantly. The three intellectual areas to watch are developments in artificial intelligence, graphics and man machine interaction and basic component and computer system design.

Policy-Making in the GCC Neil Quilliam, Mark C. Thompson, 2017-09-11 The GCC is a major player in the post 2011 reordering of the Middle East. Despite the rise in prominence of individual Gulf states especially Kuwait, Qatar, Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates and the growth of the GCC as a collective entity surprisingly little attention has been paid to the actual mechanics of policy making in the region. This book analyses the vital role that institutions are coming to play in shaping policy in the Gulf Arab states. The research coincides with two key developments that have given institutions new importance in the policy process: the emergence of a new generation of leaders in the Gulf and the era of low oil prices. Both developments along with dramatic demographic change have compelled state and citizens to re-evaluate the nature of the social contract that binds them together. Contributors assess the changing relationship between state and citizen and evaluate the role that formal and informal institutions play in mediating such change and informing policy. The book shows how academic, social and economic institutions are responding to the increasingly complex process of decision making where citizens demand better services and further empowerment and states are obliged to seek wider counsel although wanting to retain ultimate authority. With contributions from both academics and practitioners this book will be highly relevant for researchers and policymakers alike.

Carr V. Koch, 2011 Professional Development of Information Technology Professionals B. Z. Barta, Angela Goh, Linda Lim, 1992 Professional development is the process through which aspiring professionals prepare for a working career as well as the continued upgrading of practitioners. This volume offers a primary source of information for those employers, professional societies and education and training institutes specifically interested in the professional development of employees involved in the Information Technology (IT) field where crucial problems are caused by the overwhelming pace of advances in technology and methodologies Issues discussed include models and principles of professional education and development including the examination of current curricula and the investigation of the need for updating them and the promotion and effective implementation of the same through the publication of good practice in basic and continuing education Also considered are corporational experiences with I T professional development schemes and the certification of I T professional development programmes The specific needs of both developing and developed countries are represented since the 48 papers and summaries of 4 discussion groups derive from participants in IFIP s specialist Working Group 3 4 based in many different countries and organizations a catalogue of modern works on science and technology ,1887
