Genetic and Genome-Wide Insights into Microbes Studied for Bioenergy Katherine M. Pappas, Ed Louis, Nigel Minton, Biswarup Mukhopadhyay, Shane Yang, 2017-01-27

The global mandate for safer cleaner and renewable energy has accelerated research on microbes that convert carbon sources to end products serving as biofuels of the so called first second or third generation e.g. bioethanol or biodiesel derived from starchy sugar rich or oily crops bioethanol derived from composite lignocellulosic biomass and biodiesels extracted from oil producing algae and cyanobacteria respectively

Recent advances in omics applications are beginning to cast light on the biological mechanisms underlying biofuel production They also unravel mechanisms important for organic solvent or high added value chemical production which along with those for fuel chemicals are significant to the broader field of Bioenergy

The Frontiers in Microbial Physiology Research Topic that led to the current e book publication operated from 2013 to 2014 and welcomed articles aiming to better understand the genetic basis behind Bioenergy production It invited genetic studies of microbes already used or carrying the potential to be used for bioethanol biobutanol biodiesel and fuel gas production as also of microbes posing as promising new catalysts for alternative bioproducts

Any research focusing on the systems biology of such microbes gene function and regulation genetic and/or genomic tool development metabolic engineering and synthetic biology leading to strain optimization was considered highly relevant to the topic

Likewise bioinformatic analyses and modeling pertaining to gene network prediction and function were also desirable and therefore invited in the thematic forum

Upon e book development today we at the editorial strongly believe that all articles presented herein original research papers reviews perspectives and a technology report significantly contribute to the emerging insights regarding microbial derived energy production
