Kids and branding in a digital world Barry

Gunter, 2015-11-01 As consumer markets have developed and become more crowded and competitive so brands have become more important in enabling consumers to make informed choices This book shows how children become engaged with brands and understand what they mean and how their relationship with brands changes over time as they mature as consumers It sets this development against the changes that have occurred in styles of brand promotion in the digital world where more subtle ways of reaching consumers have been developed by brand marketers Children become aware of brands from an early age Even before they start school they can recognise brand names and ask for brands by name The meaning of brands to children can vary dramatically with age As with other aspects of consumer socialisation children s initial orientation towards brands occurs at a superficial level because their level of cognitive development does not allow them to understand deeper seated symbolic meanings of brands Children s understanding of brands and the relationships they have with them may also be influenced by the new promotional techniques developed by marketers Children s recognition of advertisements depends upon being able to identify specific features which signal a persuasive message In the online world of social media and computer games the presence of brands may not be recognized as advertising and so the usual learned defenses against persuasion are not triggered This could place young consumers at a disadvantage This phenomenon has raised important questions for parents educators and marketing regulators and these are addressed in this book through reference to the latest research and writings from around the world
