Woodland Conservation and Management G. F. Peterken, 2013-11-11 Professor John Harper in his recent Population Biology of Plants 1977 made a comment and asked a question which effectively states the theme of this book Noting that one of the consequences of the development of the theory of vegetational climax has been to guide the observer's mind forwards i.e. that vegetation is interpreted as a stage on the way to something he commented that it might be more healthy and scientifically more sound to look more often backwards and search for the explanation of the present in the past to explain systems in relation to their history rather than their goal He went on to contrast the disaster theory of plant succession which holds that communities are a response to the effects of past disasters with the climax theory that they are stages in the approach to a climax state and then asked do we account most completely for the characteristics of a population by a knowledge of its history or of its destiny Had this question been put to R S Adamson E J Salisbury A G Tansley or A S Watt who are amongst the giants of the first forty years of woodland ecology in Britain their answer would surely have been that understanding lies in a knowledge of destiny Whilst not unaware of the historical facts of British woodlands they were preoccupied with ideas of natural succession and climax and tended to interpret their observations in these terms

Woodland Survey Handbook Keith Kirby,Jeanette Hall,2019-05-02 How do you record the wildlife in a wood This book explains ways to record the flora and fauna found in woodland and outlines the sources you can use to find out more about the history and management of an area Whether you have just a few hours or a few years there are examples that you can follow to find out more about this important habitat Woods include some of the richest terrestrial wildlife sites in Britain but some are under threat and many are neglected such that they are not as rich as they might be If we are to protect them or increase their diversity we need first to know what species they contain how they have come to be as they are to understand how they fit into the wider landscape Conservation surveys are the bedrock on which subsequent protection and management action is based There is not one method that will be right for all situations and needs so the methods discussed range from what one can find out online to what can be seen on a general walk round a wood to the insights that can come from more detailed survey and monitoring approaches Fast evolving techniques such as eDNA surveys and the use of LiDAR are touched on
