

Checks and Balances

The Constitution of the United States created three separate branches of government: the Legislative Branch (Congress), the Executive Branch (President), and the Judicial Branch (Supreme Court). The Constitution has "checks and balances" to make sure that one branch does not become too powerful and allow each branch to keep the others in line.

Separation of Powers

The powers of the government are balanced among the three branches. Each branch possesses different powers. For example, Congress makes laws, sets the budget, and declares war. The President appoints Supreme Court judges, is the Commander in Chief of the military, and grants pardons. The Supreme Court interprets the law and can declare laws unconstitutional.

Checks

Each branch has checks on the other branches to keep each branch from becoming too powerful.

Congress

The president can check Congress by vetoing a bill. If a bill is vetoed, it goes back to Congress to be voted on again. If it is passed by a two-thirds majority, the veto is overturned and the bill becomes a law. The vice-president is the president of the Senate and becomes the deciding vote in the case of tie in the Senate. The Supreme Court can check Congress by declaring a law unconstitutional.

President

Congress can check the power of the president in many ways. Through impeachment, Congress votes to have the president removed from office. Two presidents, Andrew Johnson and Bill Clinton, have been impeached, but neither were removed from office. The president appoints the Supreme Court justices and other officials, but the Congress has to approve them. Generals and Admirals of the U.S. military are appointed by the president and approved by the Senate. The Supreme Court checks the president by declaring executive orders as unconstitutional.
