Gaffney's Local Government in South Africa, 2009 Servamus, 2006 Finance and Governance of Capital Cities in Federal Systems Enid Slack, Rupak Chattopadhyay, 2009-11-21 Using capital cities in Australia Belgium Canada Ethiopia Germany India Mexico Nigeria South Africa Switzerland and the United States as case studies contributors examine federal policies towards capital cities with a particular emphasis on how capital cities are funded and governed and the extent to which the federal government compensates them for their unique role The Eagle and the Springbok Adekeye Adebajo, 2023-06-23 Nigeria and South Africa account for about a third of Africa's economic might and have led much of its conflict management initiatives over the last three decades. Both account for at least 60 per cent of the economy of their respective sub regions in West and Southern Africa. The success of political and economic integration in Africa thus rests heavily on the shoulders of these two regional powers who have both collaborated and competed with each other in a complex relationship that is Africa's most indispensable. Nigeria remains among South Africa's largest trading partners in Africa while both countries have cooperated in building the institutions of the African Union (AU). Both countries have also had a tremendous cultural impact on the continent in terms of Nollywood movies and the expansion of South Africa's corporate sector into Africa. This book assesses Nigeria-South Africa relations in the areas of politics economics and culture within the context of rivalries and hegemony. Biographical profiles are also provided of important figures from both countries Drum, 2006 Civil Engineering, 2004 International Directory of Arts, 2007 Challenges Affecting the Standard and Technical Compliance of Radio Communication in Tshwane Fire Brigade, 2018 This study explored the standard of radio communication of the City of Tshwane Fire Brigade in relation to international standards. It also evaluated the functionality of the two way communication radio used by the City of Tshwane Fire Brigade and its resilience to withstand extreme conditions of the firefighting environment such as heat from flashover conditions at 50 kW/m². In the experiments three radios were exposed to Thermal Class 3 maximum temperature of 260 °C and heat flux of 10 kW/m². Radio A's screen deformed slightly and the outer covering stayed intact after five minutes and could still make voice transmissions. Radio B's covering material and screen started to deform after three minutes but could still make voice transmissions after five minutes.

Radio C's covering also deformed and the screen was affected and there was no voice transmission for two minutes after the five minutes in the cone calorimeter. Furthermore, the study investigated the network coverage and the signal strength of two-way radios, including technical challenges and limitations of the two-way radios themselves. Buildings that were chosen for the two-way radio voice transmissions tests gave completely different results. The average voice transmission reading from Radio A was 70%, Radio B was 60%, and Radio C was 54% in randomly selected buildings in Pretoria CBD. The study also scrutinised human factors in two-way radio communication by firefighters, particularly training and procedures in relation to practice throughout international firefighting communities. The study also showed that over 90% of firefighters did not do refresher training on radio communications and over 40% had never received training at all. However, 70% of management personnel felt strongly that radio communication training should be incorporated into orientation training of the new appointees, and more than 50% were in support of refresher training.

An Exploratory Study of End-to-end Process in the Fire Brigade of the City of Tshwane Divine Chiagorom Anokam, 2015. The capacity to render reliable and highly efficient emergency and rescue services is crucially important for metropolitan municipalities such as the City of Tshwane Metropolitan Municipality (CTMM) to grow on a sustainable basis. Such capacity is also needed for fulfilling the routine needs and operational requirements of businesses that operate in the CTMM. To this end, the City of Tshwane needs to develop adequate capacity for rendering reliable and efficient emergency and rescue services by utilizing modern technology and highly innovative methods and strategies. The purpose of the study was to identify and quantify gaps in the quality of emergency and rescue services that were provided to residents of Erasmuskloof, Centurion, and Hazelwood by the City of Tshwane. One of the key aims of the study was to estimate gap scores that could be used for the assessment of discrepancies between perceptions and expectations among the residents.
