THE COLD WAR THEORY: A BRIEF HISTORY
1940s-1950s The Cold War Theory emerged as a response to the growing tension between the United States and the Soviet Union.	1950s-1960s The Cold War Theory became a dominant paradigm in international relations, particularly in the context of the arms race and the space race.	1960s-1970s The Cold War Theory was challenged by the emergence of the New Realism, which emphasized the role of power and self-interest in international relations.	1970s-1980s The Cold War Theory was further challenged by the rise of the Third World and the emergence of the Global South, which emphasized the role of economic and social factors in international relations.
1980s-1990s The Cold War Theory was largely discredited by the end of the Cold War, as the Soviet Union collapsed and the United States emerged as the sole superpower.	1990s-2000s The Cold War Theory was revived by the rise of the United States as a global superpower, which emphasized the role of power and self-interest in international relations.	2000s-2010s The Cold War Theory was further challenged by the rise of China and the emergence of the Global South, which emphasized the role of economic and social factors in international relations.	2010s-Present The Cold War Theory is still a dominant paradigm in international relations, particularly in the context of the arms race and the space race.
