Mobile Authentication Markus Jakobsson, 2012-08-21 Mobile Authentication Problems and Solutions looks at human to machine authentication with a keen focus on the mobile scenario Human to machine authentication is a startlingly complex issue In the old days of computer security before 2000 the human component was all but disregarded It was either assumed that people should and would be able to follow instructions or that end users were hopeless and would always make mistakes The truth of course is somewhere in between which is exactly what makes this topic so enticing We cannot make progress with human to machine authentication without understanding both humans and machines Mobile security is not simply security ported to a handset Handsets have different constraints than traditional computers and are used in a different way Text entry is more frustrating and therefore it is tempting to use shorter and less complex passwords It is also harder to detect spoofing We need to design with this in mind We also need to determine how exactly to integrate biometric readers to reap the maximum benefits from them This book addresses all of these issues and more

Authentication and authorization play key roles in ensuring security system over any communication network especially over GSM network Its explored from the literature that existing system over GSM is not enough for ensuring efficient security in terms of authentication as well as authorization The major security loophole found in the usage of OTP is that it generates the secure password that floats into GSM network where there is a higher degree of intrusion Another prominent issue found in majority of the OTP usages is that it is not preferred for mobile phones due to time synchronization that are usually based on an internal clock synchronization system The proposed study attempts to minimize the operational cost by generating the OTP on User trusted handheld device Because of this generation the system is rendered secure because it is not accessible to GSM network The system is designed on windows as well as on Android mobile environment using Java as programming tool to study the working prototype before the system can be actually deployed with an economic intention Furthermore the system is analyzed for its ability to thwart some common attacks and a comparative performance analysis is done to establish feasibility with current hardware profile and User ergonomic behavior The dissertation also exhibits a review of approaches and techniques that have been introduced in the past for the process of secure online authentication and authorization From the analysis of the system it has been seen that OTP generator for mobile hand held device takes less than 49 milliseconds on an average for different hardware profile belonging to diverse vendors The issue of feeding of longer length of One Time password is also resolved by incorporating byte to word conversion in Java which are human readable and User friendly By incorporating the same results in ergonomic efficiency The feeding time is shown to be reduced by approximately 60% with the inclusion of byte to word conversion AI and Session Based Password Authentication Schemes for Android Kolekar Vikas K,Vaidya Milindkumar B,2015-12-24 This book will guide researchers who had keen interest to work on user authentication In this book we had discussed click based captcha and graphical password authentication schemes Implemented system inside book provides choice of various authentication schemes to user at time of login Along with these schemes session based authentication is also provided which will protect system from unauthorized access We extend the use of captcha as human present recognition as well as graphical password hence it provides all benefits of captcha and make system more powerful from security point of view
