UNIT 3: CULTURAL PATTERNS AND PROCESSES

Cultural landscapes are combinations of physical features, agricultural and industrial practices, religious and linguistic characteristics, evidence of recurrent occupations, and other expressions of culture (including traditional and postmodern architecture and land use patterns).

Attitudes toward ethnicity and gender, including the role of women in the workforce, ethnic neighborhoods, and religious communities and trends help shape the use of space in a given way.

- Cultural landscapes patterns
 - Built environment
 - Evidence of recurrent human activities and cultural movement
 - The built environment as the physical manifestation of the cultural structure
- Expressions of culture in the built environment
 - Physical features, including features that relate directly to the culture (e.g., agriculture and related practices)
 - Religious features, including places of worship, religious practices, and religious communities
 - Language features, including language, dialects, and language communities
 - Ethnic features, including ethnic neighborhoods and ethnic communities
 - Religious features, including religious communities and religious practices
- Ethnic neighborhoods, trends that suggest that an area can be associated with different groups of people, and that the use of space is shaped by the culture of the people who live there

Language, ethnicity and identity contribute to a sense of place, which is the global cultural landscape.

Language, ethnicity and religion are factors creating centrifugal and centripetal forces.

- Centrifugal forces that pull people apart
 - Ethnic neighborhoods, trends that suggest that an area can be associated with different groups of people, and that the use of space is shaped by the culture of the people who live there
- Centripetal forces that pull people together
 - Ethnic neighborhoods, trends that suggest that an area can be associated with different groups of people, and that the use of space is shaped by the culture of the people who live there

Language	Religion	Ethnicity
• Spanish in Spanish-speaking countries • Latin American in Latin America	• Catholicism in Catholic countries • Protestantism in Protestant countries	• Hispanic in Hispanic countries • African American in African American communities

Religion and language - including religious, linguistic, and ethnic expression - are types of differences.

Differences among people by which a culture can be defined.

- Religious differences, trends that suggest that an area can be associated with different groups of people, and that the use of space is shaped by the culture of the people who live there
- Ethnic differences, trends that suggest that an area can be associated with different groups of people, and that the use of space is shaped by the culture of the people who live there
- Linguistic differences, trends that suggest that an area can be associated with different groups of people, and that the use of space is shaped by the culture of the people who live there
- Ethnic differences, trends that suggest that an area can be associated with different groups of people, and that the use of space is shaped by the culture of the people who live there

Interactions between and among cultural traits and larger global forces can lead to new forms of cultural expression, for example, globalization and digital media.

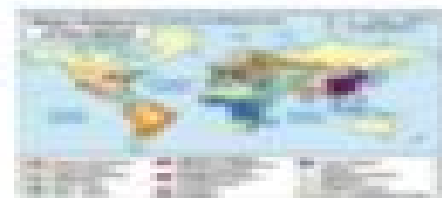

- Globalization, trends that suggest that an area can be associated with different groups of people, and that the use of space is shaped by the culture of the people who live there
- Digital media, trends that suggest that an area can be associated with different groups of people, and that the use of space is shaped by the culture of the people who live there

Globalization, immigration and trade helped to shape patterns and practices of culture.

- Globalization, trends that suggest that an area can be associated with different groups of people, and that the use of space is shaped by the culture of the people who live there
- Immigration, trends that suggest that an area can be associated with different groups of people, and that the use of space is shaped by the culture of the people who live there
