

The alternative hypothesis is that at least one of them is nonzero. The regression output using EAWE Data Set 21 is shown in Table 3.12.

In this example, $k - 1$, the number of explanatory variables, is equal to 3 and $n - k$, the number of degrees of freedom, is equal to 496. The numerator of the F statistic is the explained sum of squares divided by $k - 1$. In the Stata output these numbers (1,235.1 and 3, respectively) are given in the Model row. The denominator is the residual sum of squares divided by the number of degrees of freedom remaining—2,519.0 and 496, respectively. Hence the F statistic is as in the printed output. All serious regression applications compute this F statistic as part of the diagnostics in the regression output.

$$F(3, 496) = \frac{1,235.1 / 3}{2,519.0 / 496} = 81.1 \quad (3.70)$$

The critical value for $F(3, 496)$ is not given in the F tables, but we know it must be very close to $F(3, 500)$, which is given. At the 0.1 percent level, this is 5.51. Hence we reject H_0 at that significance level. This result could have been anticipated because both ASVABC and SF have highly significant t statistics. So we knew in advance that both β_2 and β_3 were nonzero.

In practice, the F statistic will almost always be significant if any t statistic is significant. In principle, however, it might not be. Suppose that you ran a nonsense regression with 100 explanatory variables, none being a true determinant of the dependent variable. Then the F statistic should be low enough for H_0 not to be rejected. However, if you are performing t tests on the slope coefficients at the 5 percent level, with a 5 percent chance of a Type I error, on average five of the 100 variables could be expected to have 'significant' coefficients.

On the other hand, it can easily happen that the F statistic is significant while the t statistics are not. Suppose you have a multiple regression model that is correctly specified and R^2 is high. You would be likely to have a highly significant F statistic. However, if the explanatory variables are highly correlated and
