Language, Feeling, and the Brain Daniel Shanahan, 2017-09-08 Linguistic theory since the Cognitive Revolution has followed one of the premises of that revolution by largely sidelining the issue of emotions and concentrating on those aspects of language that are more strictly cognitive However during the last ten years research in cognitive science especially in neuropsychology has begun to fill in the gaps left by the exclusion of emotions from cognitive research The work of those like Oatley Zajonc Damasio and LeDoux to name a few has demonstrated both that it is possible to construct models of how emotions play into the workings of the psyche and that they are necessary in giving us a balanced view of the human mind Language Feeling and the Brain attempts to apply the fruits of this new research in emotion to our understanding of language itself Building on Karl Pribram's integrated model of emotions and motivations the book takes an eclectic approach to explaining how emotions contribute to the nature of language drawing on research done in neuropsychology philosophy cognitive linguistics anthropology and related fields Its aim is to construct a propositional model for how the emotions may have contributed to the emergence of symbolic formation most especially in the forms of gesture and speech and how identifying that emotional influence sheds new light on everything we have had to say about language itself from lexis and grammar to culture and literature

The Janus-Face of Language: Where Are the Emotions in Words and the

Words in Emotions? Cornelia Herbert, Thomas Ethofer, Andreas J. Fallgatter, Peter Walla, Georg Northoff, 2018-09-28

Language has long been considered independent from emotions. In the last few years however research has accumulated empirical evidence against this theoretical belief of a purely cognitive based foundation of language. In particular through research on emotional word processing it has been shown that processing of emotional words activates emotional brain structures elicits emotional facial expressions and modulates action tendencies of approach and avoidance probably in a similar manner as processing of non verbal emotional stimuli does. In addition it has been shown that emotional content is already processed in the visual cortex in a facilitated manner which suggests that processing of emotional language content is able to circumvent in depth semantic analysis. Yet this is only one side of the coin. Very recent research putting words into context suggests that language may also construe emotions and that by studying word processing one can provide a window to one's own feelings. All in all the empirical observations support the thesis of a close relationship between language and emotions at the level of word meaning as a specific evolutionary achievement of the human species. As such this relationship seems to be different from the one between emotions and speech where emotional meaning is conveyed by nonverbal features of the voice. But what does this relationship between written words and emotions theoretically imply for the processing of emotional information? The present Research Topic and its related articles aim to provide answers to this question. This book comprises several experimental studies investigating the brain structures and the time course of emotional word processing. Included are studies examining the affective core dimensions underlying affective word processing and studies that show how these basic affective dimensions influence word processing in general as well as the interaction between words feelings and expressive behavior. In addition new impetus comes from studies that on the one hand investigate how task sublexical and intrapersonal factors influence emotional word processing and on the other hand extend emotional word processing to the domains of social context and self related processing. Finally future perspectives are outlined including research on emotion and language acquisition culture and multilingualism. In summary this textbook offers scientists from different disciplines insight into the neurophysiological behavioral and subjective mechanisms underlying emotion and language interactions. It gives new impulses to existing theories on the embodiment of language and emotion and provides new ways of looking at emotion cognition interactions.

The Science of Feelings Eugene Tee, 2020-09-23

What are emotions and why do we experience them? In the last 50 years or so psychological science has shed light on the essence of what makes us human why we experience a range of feelings from joy to sadness anger to fear and compassion to contempt. Yet the science of emotion remains mostly inaccessible to the curious reader and those outside academic circles. This book is a story of our emotions a story of why and how we feel as human beings. It is a tale of our emotions told by philosophers biologists neuroscientists sociologists and economists. Drawing on the rich psychological research on emotions this book invites you to revisit your emotions and to better appreciate and understand how feeling states define us and our humanity Language and Emotion James M. Wilce, 2009-04-09 Language is a means we use to communicate feelings we also reflect emotionally on the language we and others use James Wilce analyses the signals people use to express emotion looking at the social cultural and political functions of emotional language around the world His book demonstrates that speaking feeling reflecting and identifying are interrelated processes and shows how desire or shame are attached to language Drawing on nearly one hundred ethnographic case studies it demonstrates the cultural diversity historical emergence and political significance of emotional language Wilce brings together insights from linguistics and anthropology to survey an extremely broad range of genres cultural concepts and social functions of emotional expression Language and the Politics of Emotion Catherine A. Lutz, Lila Abu-Lughod, 1990-06-29 Emotions have long been a central concern in philosophy psychological and sociological studies When anthropologists began to study emotion they challenged many assumptions shared by Western academics and lay persons by exposing the cultural variability of emotional meanings In this collection of original essays by anthropologists concerned with the relationship of language and emotion it is argued that the key focus to the study of emotion might be the politics of social life rather than the psychology of the individual Through close studies of talk about emotion and emotional discourses in social contexts from poetry and song to therapeutic narratives scholars who have worked in India Fiji the United States Egypt Senegal and the Solomon Islands show how emotion is tied to politics of everyday interaction Their arguments and cross cultural findings will intrigue and provoke anyone who has thought about the relationship between emotion language and social life The book will be of special interest to those who find the boundaries between cultural psychological and linguistic anthropology sociology cross cultural psychiatry and social psychology too confining
