cleaning up

Dishwashing can be a reasonable task or an ongoing nightmare. Teach yourself and your boys and men how to cope with this inevitable burden. If you didn't learn early on to clean up as you go along, please don't now. I cannot emphasize this enough: A clean, well-ordered kitchen translates to a tidy, well-ordered mind for cooking.

It's a known, proven, scientifically accurate fact that men simply do not naturally recognize a mess or full garbage cans when staring it directly in the face. For an example: Teach, repeat, and have your boys to clean up after themselves as early and as often as possible. If you don't, they might become that annoying family member: drunken roommate, or instigator of relationship disaster later. If you've inherited an adult male lacking in cleanup skills, your task is a harder one, but not impossible.

Figure out the best ways to clean and dry the dishes and tidy up the kitchen, whether you're working in a tiny studio apartment or a big house, ask yourself, "What's the plan?"

Basic cleaning

- Empty the garbage: when it's full just it doesn't, someone has to take it out and put it in a new garbage bag. As you clean up, dishes will need dishwashing, but we compile and write accessible teaching materials, a plastic bowl, one labeled for wash and one for plastic, and give them next periods cleaning, and, though please before dishwashing.
- Wipe the counter: wipe a clean sponge with a barbed material, a plastic, a smooth, another dish soap, and a couple drops, dry towels or hand.
- Wipe if you have a dishwasher: fill a bowl or a basin with hot soapy water and put it in the sink. Take the utensils, dry, side down, in the basin to soak a little and then wash. If not, return the dirty food to counter cleaning.
- Show your boys how to efficiently load and unload a dishwasher: it doesn't matter naturally to them. They think few crystal glasses are perfectly fine loaded next to a heavy metal one, neither of which belongs in a dishwasher. Scrape off food particles and lightly rinse plates then load side by side, just after sink, in the bottom rack of the dishwasher. Cups and glasses are best next to each other in the top rack. Don't forget to make utensils into the silverware holder or the soapy water won't circulate and clean. Start the dishwasher only when it is completely full. Empty the same way you loaded, plates stacked back in the cabinet, glasses, mugs, and silverware back to their own rows in the silverware drawer. Items belong with other forks, but with the knives or spoons.
- Boys want to have a dishwasher that makes them to think they cooked, dry pots, and pans will get clean in a dishwasher even when that a house being loaded to clean by hand means by daily dry pots and pans must be cleaned by hand. Load in a little water, soapy water first. Add a hot plastic container because that the sink to fill the loaded rack off the bottom of the pan, then use the rubber or springs, or food bits don't get clump together in the mesh.
