

Abstract.—Large populations of species at risk decline. I discuss some reasons why and suggest some ways to address the problem. I conclude that the best way to address the problem is to develop a conservation strategy that is based on a sound understanding of the biology of the species and the environment. I also suggest that the best way to address the problem is to develop a conservation strategy that is based on a sound understanding of the biology of the species and the environment.

- 1) The following are the functions of the Management Information System in the management process:
- a) Planning - It helps in the planning process by providing the necessary data and information to the management.
 - b) Controlling - It helps in the controlling process by providing the necessary data and information to the management.
 - c) Decision Making - It helps in the decision making process by providing the necessary data and information to the management.
- 2) The following are the Advantages of the Management Information System:
- a) Improved Decision Making - It provides the management with the necessary data and information to make better decisions.
 - b) Increased Efficiency - It helps in the efficient use of resources and in the timely completion of tasks.
 - c) Cost Reduction - It helps in the reduction of costs by providing the management with the necessary data and information to make better decisions.
- 3) The following are the Challenges of the Management Information System:
- a) Data Quality - The quality of the data is a major challenge in the management information system.
 - b) Integration - The integration of the management information system with other systems is a major challenge.
 - c) Security - The security of the management information system is a major challenge.

These findings suggest that individuals with schizophrenia who are not taking antipsychotic drugs should be given a thorough clinical assessment.

Only findings that are statistically significant at the 5% level are reported. χ^2 tests are used to examine the null hypothesis of no association between the variables. The results are reported in the form of odds ratios (OR) and 95% confidence intervals (CI). The ORs are calculated using the following formula: $OR = \frac{a/b}{c/d}$, where a is the number of cases in the exposed group, b is the number of controls in the exposed group, c is the number of cases in the unexposed group, and d is the number of controls in the unexposed group.
