Reggio Emilia (RE), which is an approach adopted in many countries throughout the world today, has a philosophy centered on children. The aim of this study is to examine the Reggio Emilia approach, which emerged in Italy and is an education approach in preschool education, and its qualities, the curriculum and curriculum development process, the roles of teachers and students in it. In addition to that, activity samples based on the approach are also discussed.

Key words: The Reggio Emilia Approach, Preschool Education, Curriculum Development

1. INTRODUCTION

Balat et al. (2011) defined preschool education period as a systematic and conscious educational period which covers the time between the birth of a child and the years that elapsed until the 72th month of his life, which is intended for physical, psychomotor, social, emotional, mental and lingual development of children in this age group in compliance with their individual qualities and development levels, which provides children with environment that are rich in terms of stimulants, which guides them in the best way according to the cultural values and qualities and which takes part in the integrity of the basic education by preparing children to primary education.

Preschool period is the period during which the individual development and education of a person occurs the fastest. Habits, skills and knowledge that a child gained during preschool period will render him successful in the coming years. Benefits of preschool education, which has a very important place in terms of the development and learning of a child, can be realized with quality preschool educational programs. Basic principles and qualities were clearly stated in Preschool curriculum intended for children between 36 to 72 months which was applied by the Ministry of Education in our country. This curriculum renders a teacher free and allows flexibility while it provides guidance in terms of reaching a quality (Alisinanoglu et al., 2011; 11-12).

"Preschool Curriculum for Children between 36 to 72 Months" was tested in 2006 in Turkey and put into use to be developed. Curriculum development works were conducted by taking into consideration the current status analyses made within the scope of the work of the Project for Strengthening Preschool Education, national and international studies in the area and the feedbacks received from the application. Preschool Curriculum was implemented to ensure that children attending preschool educational institutions grow up healthily with rich learning experiences, they reach the highest level by supporting every area of development, they gain self-care skills and they are prepared for the basic education. Curriculum, which is "developmental" since it is based on development levels and qualities of children and it takes basis the development of each developmental area within this context, is "immersive" by nature and it is "eclectic" by model. Basic qualities of the curriculum can be summarized as it follows:

- ✓ It is intended for children between 36 and 72 months.
- ✓ It is centered on children.
- ✓ Objectives and attainments are essential.
- ✓ Developmental qualities are prepared separately for each age group.
- ✓ Subjects are not objective but means.
- ✓ There are no units.
