TRANSFORMATION IN BANKING: LEVERAGING BIG DATA AND AI Kaushikkumar Patel,2024-01-10 There was a time when the banking business was differentiated by its traditional brick and mortar operations but in the present day it is at the forefront of digital innovation It has become clearly clear that the moment for digital transformation in banking is certainly now This is because the expectations of consumers continue to rise continuously and the need for experiences that are both seamless and customised continues to grow Through the use of cutting edge technology and solutions that are centred on the user financial institutions are able to enhance the services they offer streamline their processes and preserve their competitive advantage in an environment that is continually evolving In addition to this the emergence of disruptive fintech companies that are challenging the status quo is another aspect that is contributing to the growing need of adopting digital tactics This is in addition to the fact that it is essential to provide services to customers who are well versed in contemporary technological developments During the fiscal year 2022 mid size banks and credit unions raised their investments in digital transformation by more than fifty percent reaching roughly four hundred and twenty five thousand dollars for every one billion dollars in assets according to a research that was just published by Alkami This is an increase from the average of slightly more than 200 000 per 1 billion in assets for the fiscal year 2021 and it is only projected that this trend will continue to climb in the fiscal year 2023 This shows an increase from the previous year In order for financial institutions to continue to provide their customers value convenience and safety in the 21st century it is essential for them to take substantial steps in the process of modernising their operations as we go deeper into the age of digital banking This will guarantee that they continue to provide their customers with these benefits InfoWorld ,2004-11-15 InfoWorld is targeted to Senior IT professionals Content is segmented into Channels and Topic Centers InfoWorld also celebrates people companies and projects
