

Lecture 11/21

WORK AREA

Assume the existence of a class `RangeException`, with a constructor that accepts minimum, maximum and violating integer value.

Write a function, void `verify(int min, int max)` that reads in integers from the standard input and compares them against its two parameters. As long as the numbers are between min and max (inclusive), the function continues to read in values. As soon as it is encountered that is less than min or greater than max, the function throws a `RangeException` with the min and max values, and the violating (i.e., out of range) input.

SUMMARY

```

1 void verify( int min, int max)
2 {
3     //
4     //
5     //
6     int input;
7     cin >> input;
8     while (input <= min || input >= max)
9     {
10         cout << "Invalid\n";
11         if(input < min || input > max)
12             throw RangeException(min, max, input);
13     }
14 }
```
