Directory of Corporate Counsel, Spring 2024 Edition , New SubUrbanisms Judith De Jong,2013-09-11 Historically we see the city as the cramped crumbling core of development and culture and the suburb as the vast outlying wasteland convenient but vacant Contemporary urban design proves this wrong In New SubUrbanisms Judith De Jong explains the on going flattening of the American Metropolis as suburbs are becoming more like their central cities and cities more like their suburbs through significant changes in spatial and formal practice as well as demographic and cultural changes. These revisionist practices are exemplified in the emergence of hybrid sub-urban conditions such as parking practices, the residential densification of suburbia, hyper-programmed public spaces and inner-city big box retail among others. Each of these hybridized conditions reflects to varying degrees the reciprocating influences of the urban and the suburban. Each also offers opportunities for innovation in new formal and spatial practices that reconfigure conventional understandings of urban and suburban and in new ways of forming the evolving American metropolis. Based on this new understanding, De Jong argues for the development of new ways of building the city. Aimed at students and practitioners of urban design and planning, New SubUrbanisms attempts to reframe the contemporary metropolis in a way that will generate more instrumental engagement and ultimately better design.

Executive Coaching Sam Fanasheh, 2005. The study explored the perception of executive coaching among the chief executive officers (CEOs) of America's largest 500 companies as shown on Fortune magazine list of April 15, 2002. This study utilized an instrument of 12 questions. The questionnaire was sent to the CEOs of the top 500 American companies. A cover letter and a self-addressed postage paid envelope were provided. Attribute responses were coded and analyzed using several descriptive statistical tools. Out of the 500 targeted CEOs, 143 participated in this study. Seventy-six percent of the respondents demonstrated a good understanding of the basic concepts of executive coaching. Eighty-three percent were able to distinguish coaching from consulting. 61% stated that coaching can make their life somewhat better. 49% agreed on the idea of hiring executive coaches and 32% declared that they had hired coaches. Those who never hired a coach showed a great deal of willingness, 37% to hire one. Sixty-two percent of the respondents indicated a preference for coaches from outside their organizations. 51% would search for one through human resources. 31% preferred sites off their company premises for coaching sessions and 43% would keep their coaching relationship confidential. Thirty-nine percent of the participants expressed the belief that coaching should not be limited to a specific management level and 37% said they supported research related to executive coaching. Based on these findings, executive coaching can be considered as a worthwhile investment. Future studies may take a closer look at the details and characteristics of the coaching session and may explore what is called the trusted advisor, someone who is believed to be much closer to the client than is the coach.
