Psychological Evaluation of the Developmentally and Physically Disabled

Jean-Pierre Fouque,Vincent B. Van Hasselt,2013-06-29 The past decade has witnessed a considerable upsurge of clinical and research interest in the problems of developmentally and physically the fields of psychology disabled persons Indeed professionals from special education rehabilitation psychiatry and social work have all directed attention to the development and implementation of evaluation and remedial programs The heightened activity in this area is in part a result of early assessment research with these popUlations which provided preliminary evidence of difficulties in social and emotional adjustment in many disabled individuals In response to these findings many intervention efforts have been implemented to deal with these issues and improve the life situation of the disabled Also there were indications that developmentally and physically disabled children often were deprived of adequate educations As a result legal and legislative initiatives have been enacted in recent years to make public education available to all students irrespective of disability Central to all therapeutic and psychoeducational endeavors with the disabled is psychological evaluation Only through careful and comprehensive psychological evaluation can areas of deficit as well as strengths be identified Once treatment targets and goals have been ascertained psychological evaluation is needed to determine the efficacy of intervention strategies However the field of psychological evaluation in general and with disabled persons in particular has become highly specialized This is largely a function of the changing roles of psychological evaluators Handbook on the Neuropsychology of Aging and Dementia Lisa D. Ravdin,Heather L. Katzen,2012-09-14 With the aging of the baby boomers and medical advances that promote longevity older adults are rapidly becoming the fastest growing segment of the population As the population ages so does the incidence of age related disorders Many predict that 15% 20% of the baby boomer generation will develop some form of cognitive decline over the course of their lifetime with estimates escalating to up to 50% in those achieving advanced age Although much attention has been directed at Alzheimer s disease the most common form of dementia it is estimated that nearly one third of those cases of cognitive decline result from other neuropathological mechanisms In fact many patients diagnosed with Alzheimer s disease likely have co morbid disorders that can also influence cognition i e vascular cognitive impairment suggesting mixed dementias are grossly under diagnosed The Clinical Handbook on the Neuropsychology of Aging and Dementia is a unique work that provides clinicians with expert guidance and a hands on approach to neuropsychological practice with older adults The book will be divided into two sections the first addressing special considerations for the evaluation of older adults and the second half focusing on common referral questions likely to be encountered when working with this age group The authors of the chapters are experts and are recognized by their peers as opinion leaders in their chosen chapter topics The field of neuropsychology has played a critical role in developing methods for early identification of late life cognitive disorders as well as the differential diagnosis of dementia Neuropsychological assessment provides valuable clinical information regarding the nature and severity of cognitive symptoms associated with dementia Each chapter will reinforce the notion that neuropsychological measures provide the clinician with sensitive tools to differentiate normal age related cognitive decline from disease associated impairment aid in differential diagnosis of cognitive dysfunction in older adults as well as identify cognitive deficits most likely to translate into functional impairments in everyday life *Catalog of Copyright Entries.
