Buildings and Communications Dept,1965 Canal Irrigation in Prehistoric Mexico William E. Doolittle,2014-07-03 Prehistoric farmers in Mexico invented irrigation developed it into a science and used it widely Indeed many of the canal systems still in use in Mexico today were originally begun well before the discovery of the New World In this comprehensive study William E Doolittle synthesizes and extensively analyzes all that is currently known about the development and use of irrigation technology in prehistoric Mexico from about 1200 B C until the Spanish conquest in the sixteenth century A D Unlike authors of previous studies who have focused on the political economic and social implications of irrigation Doolittle considers it in a developmental context He examines virtually all the known systems from small canals that diverted runoff from ephemeral mountain streams to elaborate networks that involved numerous large canals to irrigate broad valley floors with water from perennial rivers Throughout the discussion he gives special emphasis to the technological elaborations that distinguish each system from its predecessors He also traces the spread of canal technology into and through different ecological settings This research substantially clarifies the relationship between irrigation technology in Mexico and the American Southwest and argues persuasively that much of the technology that has been attributed to the Spaniards was actually developed in Mexico by indigenous people These findings will be important not only for archaeologists working in this area but also for geographers historians and engineers interested in agriculture technology and arid lands The Home Library of Useful Knowledge and Handy Business Manual ,1906 Performance assessment of the water regulation and distribution system in the Chishtian Sub-division at the main and secondary canal levels , Australian Mechanical Engineering ,1955 Design and Operation of Smallholder Irrigation in South Asia D. Soil Conservation Service,1969 Land Drainage and Irrigation Salvatore Ciriaco,2017-05-15 Man s control over the elements of land and water for the purposes of agriculture was fundamental to the development of civilisations in the past and remains so today This volume deals with the processes of irrigation and land drainage and reclamation and illustrates the variety of technological and engineering solutions in a wide chronological and geographical perspective The sophistication of many pre modern systems is clear as is the impact of modern technologies Important points that emerge are that there was no steady or linear progression in techniques across time instances of the transfer of ideas are balanced by cases of independent development and that the correlations between irrigation systems and social structures demand more complex explanations than often proposed
