Abstract

- the development of numerous private, regional, national, and/or international organizations (e.g., World Bank, Inter-American Development Bank, etc.) that promote, support, and/or coordinate political and economic reforms. The role of these organizations has expanded in the last decade as governments become increasingly centralized and authoritarian. Furthermore, many of these groups of international organizations have established independent evaluation systems.
- One potential consequence of these developments is that the role of the international community will be reduced.
- However, as budget cuts are implemented, governments are likely to experience a reduction in the number of staff and resources.
- It is important to note that the role of the international community is not necessarily reduced.
