

20. Kappo

Sasoi-katsu

1-2. The patient should be sitting before you, with legs crossed. Bend your right knee and place the knee-cap against his spine, letting your right hand come up off the mat. Spread your fingers and place your hands on his lower chest, hooking your fingers under his lower ribs. Pull back as if turning the ribs to either side, put your weight on the shoulders as if bent his body back, and press forward with your right knee, letting your foot come down on the mat. This will draw air into his lungs. When his ribs have been opened as far as they will go, release them. Air will be expelled from his lungs. Repeat the process slowly and regularly, at a rate of 10 to 15 times a minute, until he begins breathing by himself. If you see a slight effort to breathe on his part, take care to maintain his movement, not to oppose them.

Inductive Method

3-4. The right side of the patient and support his arm around his shoulder. With the right side of your right hand on his shoulder, press down on the shoulder to the mat, and press up against the bottom of it as if to stretch. This will cause a slight intake, making air flow from the lungs. Repeat the same by bending his upper body against your left arm.

5. Gently release your pressure on the lungs. Repeat this procedure.

If you want to administer on the patient's jaw with your right hand, your left hand on his right shoulder, hold it about with your arm-katsu.

During practice and tournament competition, a judoka is sometimes choked into unconsciousness, and his breathing stops. He may be suffocated by congestion, anemia, brain compression or defective oxidation in the bloodstream caused by pressure on the carotid arteries, trachea or vagus nerves. If kappo (resuscitation techniques) are applied promptly, there is no cause for alarm.

Kappo developed as a part of jujutsu in the eighteenth century alongside nippo, the art of attacking the body's vital points. Both were treated as secret arts. Instruction was oral, and students were forbidden to pass their knowledge on to others without their master's permission.

Numerous methods of kappo have been devised, including randen-katsu (lower abdomen method), juno-katsu (kidney method), dekishi or tsuchi-katsu (treatment for drowning victims) and ishi-katsu (harding treatment). The four techniques given below are the ones most often resorted to.

When applying any of the resuscitation techniques, it is important that nothing obstructs the passage of air into the trachea, food, water, the tongue, or some other object which is removed with the fingers. Have someone hold the tongue, or tie a rubber band around it and loop the end to a finger. If you have a safety pin, you can pin his tongue to the side of a drowning victim, you should first drain the water from his face down, his head lower than his feet to lower back. Then roll him over and apply the technique. A cylinder of some kind is rolled over the abdomen and should be kept as warm as possible.

A person choked unconscious by a throw should be put in a prone position, and be kept warm. Avoid giving him more than a drink at once.
