

Paper #4 - The Research Paper

The research paper is very similar to the other papers you've written this semester in that it combines those analytic elements you've already used (such as in close readings/explications/thematic analysis) with research to produce an in-depth examination of a work or works in seven to nine pages. The research paper is the culmination of your semester of writing papers. Because of this, your research paper is worth a total of 25 percent of your grade (five percent of your total grade is your annotated bibliography; 20 percent of your total grade is your paper). For this paper, you will be asked to find a work or related works that we've read in class and find a question that the text provokes. Afterwards, research your topic and answer your question within your paper. Remember that asking yourself a question is important; Booth, Colomb, and Williams state in The Craft of Research, "If a writer asks no question worth pondering, he can offer no focused answer worth reading" (45).

Research topics should be appropriately narrow so that you may actually solve your question within seven to nine pages. Topics should be narrow enough to be fresh ideas, or ideas that hopefully no one has written about before. As Booth, Colomb, and Williams state, "A research topic is an interest defined narrowly enough for you to imagine becoming a local expert on it" (41).

Pick a work or a couple of works that we've read that you're interested in, but make sure you have a strong interest in it (or them). Think of a question that your work (or works) provokes, which can serve for your topic. Then narrow your topic. Research your topic with credible sources. And last, write your paper and cite your sources properly. Research papers are the simplest to define.

Research: What it is.

A research paper is the culmination and final product of an involved process of research, critical thinking, source evaluation, organization, and composition. It is, perhaps, helpful to think of the research paper

Civil Procedure in EU Competition Cases Before the English and Dutch Courts George Cumming, Mirjam Freudenthal,2010-01-01 For decades it seemed clear that EC competition law was enforceable effectively at the national level and ECJ case law has continued to bear this out In recent years however the Commission has been proposing harmonization of national rules of procedure in competition cases implying that procedural autonomy is insufficient on its own to produce an effective enforcement system in this area As the authors of this book clearly demonstrate this suggests a binary system governing the enforcement of EC Articles 81 and 82 namely that led by the Commission through directives and eventual regulations and that built on ECJ principles in areas not dealt with by such Community instruments This book describes and analyzes not only the specific Commission recommendations but also the manner and extent to which these recommendations are or may be implemented in civil procedure In particular the authors consider changes which may be required if these recommendations are incorporated into Dutch and English rules of civil procedure Also addressed are elements of procedure not mentioned by the Commission but which might usefully be considered in the context of ECJ principles of effectiveness equivalence and effective judicial protection of rights At the heart of the study is a detailed analysis of the Commission White Paper on Damages Actions and the Commission Staff Working Paper both issued early in 2009 The in depth analysis ranges over procedural aspects of such elements as the following and standing and disclosure and access to evidence and burden of proof and fault no fault and costs of damages actions and injunctions and civil versus administrative enforcement and limitations and leniency programmes and collective actions and confidentiality and forms of compensation Anticipating as it does a looming impasse in European competition law this remarkable book sheds defining light on the real implications of EC competition law for parties to damages actions not only in the national systems studied but for all Member States For practitioners and jurists it offers a particularly useful approach to the handling of cases involving European competition law and also serves as a guide to current trends and as a clarification of doctrine
