

The Digestive System

What is the digestive system?

The digestive system, or gastrointestinal tract, is a tract of organs that is responsible for digesting and absorbing nutrients from food. Food enters through the mouth, is broken down in the stomach, and then moves through the small intestine, where nutrients are absorbed. The digestive system also includes accessory organs that help in the process, such as the liver, pancreas, and gallbladder.

Liver, pancreas & gallbladder

After leaving the stomach, chyme moves into the duodenum, the first part of the small intestine, where it is mixed with bile secreted by the liver and pancreatic juice secreted by the pancreas. This area is a mixing region on the intestine where the digestive system continues. The gallbladder stores bile and releases it into the duodenum.

Large intestine
The large intestine consists of the cecum, the cecocolon, ascending colon, transverse colon, descending colon, sigmoid colon, and rectum. It is responsible for absorbing water and electrolytes from the remaining indigestible food matter.

Peristaltic action
Food material is pushed through the digestive system by a series of powerful muscular contractions called peristalsis. These contractions move the material forward and the wave action, which the waves then follow.

The mouth & salivary glands

Chewing, the mechanical action of the food, is called mastication. Salivary glands secrete saliva into the mouth. The saliva contains the enzyme amylase, which begins the digestion of carbohydrates. Saliva also contains mucus, which helps in the swallowing of food.

The stomach

The stomach is a large, muscular organ that is responsible for the digestion of food. It is located in the upper left part of the abdomen. The stomach wall is composed of several layers, including the mucosa, submucosa, muscle, and serosa.

Small intestine

The small intestine consists of three parts: the duodenum, jejunum, and ileum. It is responsible for the digestion of food and the absorption of nutrients. The small intestine is highly coiled and has a large surface area for absorption.

Absorption

The process of absorption occurs in the small intestine. Nutrients are absorbed through the intestinal lining into the bloodstream. The large intestine is responsible for the absorption of water and electrolytes.
