Minitel Julien Mailland, Kevin Driscoll, 2017-06-30 The first scholarly book in English on Minitel the pioneering French computer network offers a history of a technical system and a cultural phenomenon A decade before the Internet became a medium for the masses in the United States tens of millions of users in France had access to a network for e-mail e-commerce chat research game playing blogging and even an early form of online porn In 1983 the French government rolled out Minitel a computer network that achieved widespread adoption in just a few years as the government distributed free terminals to every French telephone subscriber With this volume Julien Mailland and Kevin

Driscoll offer the first scholarly book in English on Minitel examining it as both a technical system and a cultural phenomenon Mailland and Driscoll argue that Minitel was a technical marvel a commercial success and an ambitious social experiment Other early networks may have introduced protocols and software standards that continue to be used today but Minitel foretold the social effects of widespread telecomputing They examine the unique balance of forces that enabled the growth of Minitel public and private open and closed centralized and decentralized Mailland and Driscoll describe Minitel s key technological components novel online services and thriving virtual communities Despite the seemingly tight grip of the state however a lively Minitel culture emerged characterized by spontaneity imagination and creativity After three decades of continuous service Minitel was shut down in 2012 but the history of Minitel should continue to inform our thinking about Internet policy today and into the future

Unauthorised tapping into or hacking of mobile communications Great Britain: Parliament: House of Commons: Home Affairs Committee,2011-10-28 The Commons Home Affairs Committee deplores News International s attempt to deliberately thwart the original investigation into phone hacking in 2005 06 but also states that the police set aside a huge amount of material that could have identified other perpetrators and victims The committee agrees with John Yates s own assessment that his 2009 review of this investigation was very poor that he did not ask the right questions and that he was guilty of a serious misjudgement The committee criticises Andy Hayman s cavalier attitude towards his contacts with those in News International who were under investigation which even if entirely above board risked seriously undermining confidence in the impartiality of the police and accuses him of deliberate prevarication in order to mislead the committee It urges the swift and thorough investigation of allegations that payments were made to police officers by the media which will help to establish whether or not such payments may have influenced police inquiries into phone hacking The committee welcomes DAC Sue Akers s decision to contact all potential victims of phone hacking by the News of the World as part of the current investigation but is alarmed that only 170 have as yet been informed At this rate it would take years to inform all of the several thousands of people potentially affected The committee therefore recommends that extra resources are allocated to her investigation by the Government directly if necessary The committee also expresses concern about both the scope and understanding of current laws on phone hacking with prosecutors and police still arguing over the meaning of relevant sections of the Regulation of Investigatory Powers Act 2000 However this was no reason for the Metropolitan Police to limit their investigation of these matters Finally potential victims of phone hacking should be given a means of seeking formal advice from the Information Commissioner and easier access to redress The Information Commissioner should be given additional powers to deal with breaches of data protection including phone hacking and blagging Mobile phone companies should give greater prominence to security advice in the information provided to their customers The report sets out 24 conclusions and recommendations

Tuttlebee, 2012-12-06 The mobile telecommunications industry is experiencing considerable growth at present and with the increased traffic capacities which these systems provide and falling equipment prices it is expected to continue to grow throughout the 1990s Projections of equipment costs indicate that even portable cellular handsets could come within the reach of many customers well before the end of the century This will transform mobile communications services from a minority high cost application into a mainstream telecommunications service For both market and technical reasons it is likely that the distinction between cellular Telepoint and paging services will decrease and the provision of common hardware in the form of a Universal Personal Communicator will become increasingly feasible 1987 Green Paper on The European Commission's June Telecommunications included the proposal to create a European Telecommunications Standards Institute ETSI This has
