Human Rights Development Report:

Human Rights Indicators in Development Siobhan McInerney-Lankford, Hans-Otto Sano, 2010-10-26 Human rights indicators are central to the application of human rights standards in context and relate essentially to measuring human rights realization both qualitatively and quantitatively. They offer an empirical or evidence based dimension to the normative content of human rights legal obligations and provide means of connecting those obligations with empirical data and evidence and in this way relate to human rights accountability and the enforcement of human rights obligations. Human rights indicators are important both for assessment and diagnostic purposes: the assessment function of human rights indicators relates to their use in monitoring accountability effectiveness and impact while the diagnostic purposes relates to measuring the current state of human rights implementation and enjoyment in a given context whether regional, country specific or local. This paper offers a preliminary review of the foregoing in the development context and a general perspective on the significance of human rights indicators for development processes and outcomes. It is not intended to be prescriptive and does not provide specific operational recommendations on the use of human rights indicators in development projects. Nor does it advocate a particular approach or mode of integrating human rights in development or argue for a rights based approach to development. This paper is designed to provide development practitioners with a preliminary view on the possible relevance, design and use of human rights indicators in development policy and practice. It also introduces a basic conceptual framework about the relationship between rights and development including in the World Bank context and surveys a range of methodological approaches on human rights measurement exploring in general terms different types of human rights indicators and their potential implications for development at three different levels of convergence or integration.

Indigenous People in Africa Laher, Ridwan, SingiOei, Korir, 2014-05-05 This volume is an attempt to provide this intersectional and reflexive space The thinking behind the book began in Lamu in mid 2010 It was a time when growing community resistance emerged towards the Kenyan government's plan to build a second seaport under a trans frontier infrastructural project known as the Lamu Port South Sudan Ethiopia Transport Corridor LAPSET The editors agreed that a book that draws community activists academics researchers and policy makers into a discussion of the predicament of indigenous rights and development against the backdrop of the Endorois case was timely and needed Assembled here are the original contributions of some of the leading contemporary thinkers in the area of indigenous and human rights in Africa The book is an interdisciplinary effort with the single purpose of thinking through indigenous rights after the Endorois case but it is not a singular laudatory remark on indigenous life in Africa The discussion begins by framing indigenous rights and claims to indigeneity as found in the Endorois decision and its related socio political history Subsequent chapters provide deeper contextual analysis by evaluating the tense relationship between indigenous peoples and the post colonial nation state Overall the book makes a peering and provocative contribution to the relational interests between state policies and the developmental intersections of indigeneity indigenous rights gender advocacy environmental conservation chronic trauma and transitional justice
