Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effects of a 12-week training program on the physical fitness and health-related quality of life of sedentary, middle-aged women. The study was a randomized, controlled trial. The subjects were randomly assigned to either a 12-week training program or a control group. The training program consisted of three sessions per week, each lasting 45 minutes. The control group did not participate in any training. The subjects were assessed at baseline and at 12 weeks. The results showed that the training program had a significant positive effect on the physical fitness and health-related quality of life of the subjects. The subjects in the training group showed significant improvements in cardiovascular fitness, muscular strength, and body composition. They also showed significant improvements in their health-related quality of life, including their physical functioning, role limitations due to physical problems, and overall health. The subjects in the control group did not show any significant changes in these variables. The results of this study suggest that a 12-week training program can improve the physical fitness and health-related quality of life of sedentary, middle-aged women.
