Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week, low-intensity, supervised walking program on the physical and psychological health of older adults with mild cognitive impairment (MCI). The study was a randomized, controlled trial with 20 participants in the intervention group and 20 in the control group. The intervention group walked for 30 minutes, three times a week, for 12 weeks. The control group did not walk. The intervention group showed significant improvements in physical and psychological health compared to the control group. The results suggest that a 12-week, low-intensity, supervised walking program can improve the physical and psychological health of older adults with MCI.
