High-Level Adaptation and Aftereffects Rocco Palumbo, Stefania D'Ascenzo, Luca Tommasi, 2017-04-28 Aftereffects generally occur after a prolonged exposure adaptation to a first stimulus possessing one given property followed by presentation of a stimulus bearing a neutral value of that property The aftereffect consists in a change in appearance of the neutral stimulus following the adapter compared to the appearance of the neutral stimulus when it is perceived without any previous exposure to the adapter The transient phenomena of perceptual aftereffects are believed to depend on the activation of neuron populations that respond selectively to a given property of the stimuli Studying how adaptation occurs which stimulus properties are sensitive to it which timings are necessary whether individual differences modulate its occurrence has thus become an indirect way to probe the plasticity of sensory functions in the nervous system recently extending to more cognitive and representational aspects of neural coding In the last two decades indeed it has been demonstrated that aftereffects occur not only for low level properties of stimuli such as motion color or orientation but also for high level properties Many studies have proven that high level properties of the stimuli e.g. gender identity ethnicity or age of a face or a voice are sensitive to this phenomenon It has been shown for example that the prolonged exposure to a female or male face produces a gender misperception in the opposite direction when an androgynous face is shown after the adapter Furthermore recent studies have also shown that aftereffects are not strictly contingent upon the physical features that make up stimuli but they seem to run across the high level properties subjects are adapted to These evidences are supported by cross category adaptation studies which underlie how aftereffects occur even across stimuli that do not share physical features e.g. bodies and faces but that instead share common higher level properties such as gender Given the growing body of research focused on adaptation and aftereffects in high level perception at the boundaries with perceptual learning attention and cognition the purpose of this topic is to provide a picture of the state of the art relative to the specific phenomena of adaptation in high level perceptual processing

From Social Harm to Zemiology Victoria Canning, Steve Tombs, 2021-03-30 This book outlines key developments in understanding social harm by setting out its historical foundations and the discussions which have proliferated since It examines various attempts to conceptualise social harm and highlights

key sites of contestation in its relationship to criminology to argue that these act as the basis for an activist zemiology one directed towards social change for social justice The past two decades have seen a proliferation of debate related to social harm in and around criminology From climate catastrophe and a focus on environmental harms unprecedented deaths generating focus on border harms and the coronavirus pandemic revealing the horror of mass and arguably avoidable deaths across the globe critical studies in social harm appear ever more pressing Drawing on a range of international case studies of cultural emotional physical and economic harms From Social Harm to Zemiology locates the study of social harm in an accessible fashion In doing so it sets out how a zemiological lens can move us beyond many of the problematic legacies of criminology This book rejects criminologies which have disproportionately served to regulate intersectional groups and which have arguably inflicted as much or more harm by bolstering the very ideologies of control in offering minor reforms that inadvertently expand and strengthen states and corporations It does this by sketching out the contours objects methods and ontologies of a disciplinary framework which rejects commonplace assumptions of value freedom From Social Harm to Zemiology advocates social change in accordance with groups who are most disenfranchised and thus often most socially harmed An accessible and compelling read this book is essential reading for all zemiologists critical criminologists and those engaged with criminological and social theory

Invisible, but how? The depth of unconscious processing as inferred from different suppression techniques. Julien Dubois, Nathan Faivre, 2015-02-09 To what level are invisible stimuli processed by the brain in the absence of conscious awareness It is widely accepted that simple visual properties of invisible stimuli are processed however the existence of higher level unconscious processing e g involving semantic or executive functions remains a matter of debate Several methodological factors may underlie the discrepancies found in the literature such as different levels of conservativeness in the definition of unconscious or different dependent measures of unconscious processing In this research topic we are particularly interested in yet another factor inherent differences in the amount of information let through by different suppression techniques In the same conditions of well controlled conservatively established invisibility can we show that some of the techniques in the psychophysical magic arsenal e g masking but also visual crowding attentional blink etc reliably lead to higher level unconscious processing than others e g interocular suppression Some authors have started investigating this question using multiple techniques in similar settings We argue that this approach should be extended and refined Indeed in order to delineate the frontiers of the unconscious mind using a contrastive method one has to disentangle the limits attributable to unawareness itself and those attributable to the technique inducing unawareness The scope of this research topic is to provide a platform for scientists to contribute insights and further experiments addressing this fundamental question
