ABSTRACT

Management Information System (MIS) provides information for the managerial activities in an organization. The main purpose of this research is, MIS provides accurate and timely information necessary to facilitate the decision-making process and enable the organizations planning, control, and operational functions to be carried out effectively. Management Information System (MIS) is basically concerned with processing data into information and is then communicated to the various Departments in an organization for appropriate decision-making. MIS is a subset of the overall planning and control activities covering the application of humans, technologies, and procedures of the organization. The information system is the mechanism to ensure that information is available to the managers in the form they want it and when they need it.

KEYWORDS: Management Information Systems (MIS), Information Technology, Decision Making And MIS In An Organization.

1. INTRODUCTION:

MIS provides several benefits to the business organization: the means of effective and efficient coordination between Departments; quick and reliable referencing; access to relevant data and documents; use of less labor; improvement in organizational and departmental techniques; management of day-to-day activities (as accounts, stock control, payroll, etc.); day-to-day assistance in a Department and closer contact with the rest of the world.

MIS provides a valuable time-saving benefit to the workforce. Employees do not have to collect data manually for filing and analysis. Instead, that information can be entered quickly and easily into a computer program. As the amount of raw data grows too large for employees to analyze, business analysts can build programs to access the data and information in response to queries by management. With faster access to needed information, managers can make better decisions about procedures, future directions, and developments by competitors, and make them more quickly.

We are living in a time of great change and working in an Information Age. Managers have to assimilate masses of data, convert that data into information, form conclusions about that information and make decisions leading to the achievement of business objectives. For an organization, information is as important resource as money, machinery and manpower. It is essential for the survival of the enterprise.

2 INFORMATION TECHNOLOGIES:

Management Information System (MIS) is basically concerned with processing data into information. Data collection involves the use of Information Technology (IT) comprising: computers and telecommunications networks (E-Mail, Voice Mail, Internet, telephone, etc.). Computers are important for more

, Realigning Research and Practice in Information Systems Development Nancy L. Russo,Brian Fitzgerald,Janice I. DeGross,2013-06-29 Given the pervasive nature of information technology and information systems in the modern world the design and development of IS and IT are critical issues of concern New research topics continuously emerge in tandem with the latest developments in technology E Business Knowledge Management Business Process Reengineering for example

However when the initial flurry of research abates and the gloss of these areas has diminished somewhat as it inevitably does the enduring core issue remains as to how to develop systems to fully exploit these new areas Both information systems and information technology are interpreted fairly broadly in this book Of particular interest to the editors were research studies that facilitate an understanding of the role and impact of information technology on society organizations and individuals and which strive to improve the design and use of information systems in that context The contributions to the book are categorized into four broad themes First is the core issue of developing information systems in the current environment In this section several fundamental challenges to current assumptions and conventional wisdom in information systems development are posed The second section considers the management of information systems Again the conventional wisdom is challenged The penultimate section focuses on researching information systems Here various issues to do with research methods are surfaced and the use of leading edge research methods in information systems development is pioneered and discussed Finally a section is devoted to understanding information systems This section addresses the perennial challenge in the IS field in relation to the conceptual foundations of the field This volume comprises the proceedings of the Working Conference on Realigning Research and Practice in Information Systems Development The Social and Organizational Perspective which was sponsored by the International Federation for Information Processing IFIP and held in Boise Idaho USA in July 2001 Given the central importance of information systems development in the current age this eclectic book which considers the topic from a rich and varied set of perspectives will be essential reading for researchers and practitioners working in all areas of IS and IT
