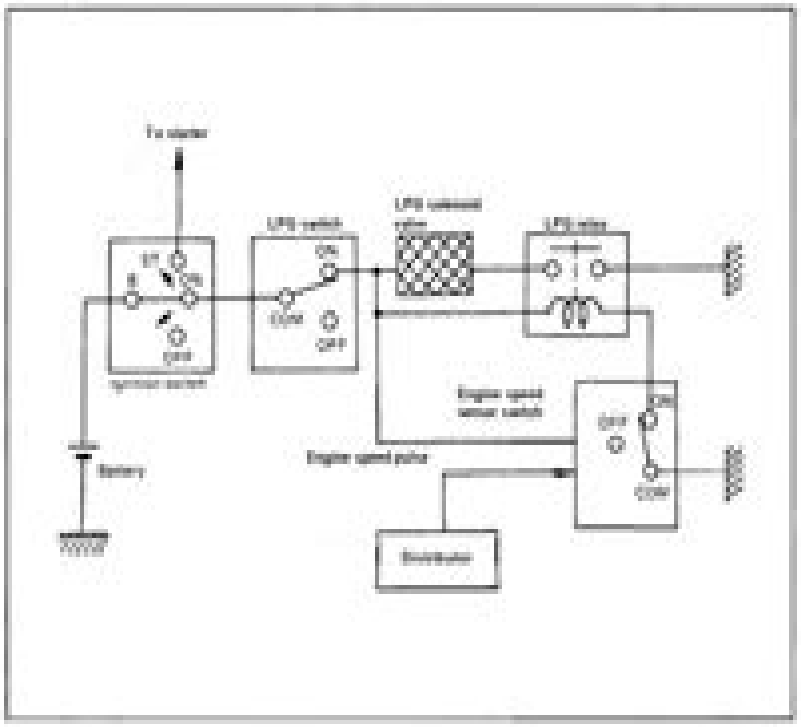
Engine oil pressure detection & LPG cut-off device (for UL and Australian/Canadian Specifications) this device prevents fuel from leaking from the carburetor into the intake manifold when the engine is stopped or the ignition switch is turned on.



Basic Circuit Diagram (When Engine is Operated) KAKM12

REGULATOR

The regulator is called a vaporizer converter. It corresponds to a part of the carburetor of the gasoline engine.

The regulator supplies vaporized LPG after pressure reduction to the engine while maintaining the pressure at a fixed level. The LPG is gasified by receiving the engine cooling water passing the regulator of heat. The regulator consists of chamber A where LPG vaporization starts, chamber B (first reducing chamber) where the gasified LPG pressure is reduced, chamber C (second reducing chamber) for reducing the pressure down to almost atmospheric level for fuel supply using the carburetor venturi negative pressure, and chamber D for forced fuel supply during engine starting and idling.
